

Why I Love ...

DESERT MOUNTAIN

By Linda Salkow of Exclusive Properties >

My life has changed dramatically since I moved with my family from New Jersey to Arizona in 1996. When we drove through Desert Mountain for the first time, it felt like the “yellow brick road” from the Wizard of Oz. I was totally amazed. There was nothing like this in Jersey, clean, green and Sonoran beautiful. Desert Mountain has been called an Arizona Disney World – an adult playground – and for me, it’s all true.

What a lifestyle, with an awesome and friendly staff, six private Jack Nicklaus designed golf courses, five fabulous restaurants, an expanded fitness facility with spa services, world class tennis, social clubs, dog park, basketball and volleyball courts and my personal favorite, the new hiking trails that just opened in November.

I have been a realtor since 2000 and have shown properties all over the valley, yet there is something refreshing about coming back up to “the Mountain” after being “off property.” An abundance of upscale amenities with homes ranging from 1,800 to 24,000 square feet in an assortment of architectural styles, make it easy to see why I call Desert Mountain my home. There is nothing better than waking up every day to a job you enjoy, while meeting so many friends and clients who are truly appreciated. I could not be happier, working and living in Desert Mountain.
